PICTURESQUE BANDITTI.

The Thorough and Artistic Way in Which They Fly Their Trade in Mexico.

It is a picturesque sight to see a band of Mexican "banditti" galloping down a mountain path on magnificent horses; their large Mexican hats, trimmed with gold and silver, shading their faces, their pantaloon buttoned down the side with large silver buttons; their pistols in their belts behind, their swords at their side, and their "serapes"—a sort of plaid of bright and variegated colors—artistically thrown over one shoulder and hiding their entire face with the exception of one eye, which glares ferociously on the unfortunate passengers of the diligence they are about to rob. Their captain gallops at their head and shouts imper-iously to the driver of the diligence to "stop." In one trip in which I encountered them there was a lady among the passengers who wore a handsome diamond ring rather tight for her finger. In her fright she could not get it off, and one of the brigands said to his leader:
"Captain, the lady cannot get her ring off. What are we to do?" To which the Mexican "Fra Diavolo" answered very coolly, "Cut her finger off."

You can easily imagine the cold shudder that ran through us all. Fortunately she at last managed to get the ring off, and we were not forced to witness an amputation. In another journey a more amusing incident occurred. There was a Bishop in the diligence, and they robbed him of his ring. When they had got through their operations, and taken everything of value we had, they knelt down and asked the Bishop to give them his blessing. He told them it was impossible to bless them without his ring, hoping in that way to get possession of it. They returned him the ring and he solemnly blessed them, but when he had done so they again took his ring and galloped off with it, leaving his Grace in the middle of the road exclaiming:

"Randidos perversos! they have robbed me even of my blessing!"

Robberies on the Vera Cruz road at that time were daily occurrences, and as the brigands possessed themselves of the passengers' clothes I have very often seen, from my balcony in the Hotel Iturbide, men and women arrive completely naked. An Englishman said to me once: "I generally travel with two or three copies of the London Times.
You know it is a very large newspaper, and in case of those confounded black-guards taking all my clothes, by Jove! the Times might be useful."

The cause of Adelina Patti's breaking her engagement to come to Mexico with Manager Maretzek twenty years ago was that she had heard of the robberies and of assassination on the Vera Cruz road.
The diva might visit us in perfect safety now, as the whistle of the locomotive has driven away the "banditti"; they have retired, saying with the gypsy mother of the "Trovatore," "Al nostri monti ritorneremo." The proof is that Paola Marie, Marie Vailot, and others of Grau's French company have arrived here from Vera Cruz laden with diamonds. Maurice Grau is making money with Halevy's opera, "Charles VI." and his new "star," Mme. Privat, who has a splendid contralto voice. His chanteuse legere, Helene Leroux, ran away from the company, thereby proving that if she was "light" of voice, she was also light of foot.—Mexican Correspondence to the New York World.

THE St. Louis Miller, the Scientific American, and the Massachusetts Eclectic Medical Journal endorse onions as an excellent food for colds settled upon the lungs. An extract can be made by boiling down the juice of onions to a syrup, that can be taken as a medicine, but eating freely of well-cooked onions is a good way to obtain their medical effect.

A Singular Gypsy Tribe.

A wandering tribe, which has caused some curiosity in Madras, may possibly be identified with a singular class of Gypsies known by the name of Mayadds, who visited Lahore in 1868, and a curious and interesting account of whom is published in a memorandum written by Dr. Leitner, and printed by the Punjab Government. In that year a large crowd of them arrived on foot and in carts from Afghanistan, and encamped for some little time in this place. They spoke a peculiar jargon among themselves, though when within earshot of Europeans and Indians they spoke Persian. At first, it seems, there was a difficulty in identifying even their place of abode, but officers from various parts of India affirmed that the noisy and quarrelsome strangers were in the way of passing periodically between this country and Central Asia, and that they had an unpleasant habit of looting villages on their route. Mayadds were always armed on reaching the Indian frontier, a fact for which they accounted by saying that they were Shiabs, whom, as every one knows, their Sunni co-relig-ionists sometimes sell as slaves. "When," says Dr. Leitner, "I visited their encampment their frantic gesticulations and the hurling of children by one woman to another in order to emphasize her rage, reminded me of a scene recorded in my account of the Gypsies of Turkey when a case was decided in favor of that side in a tribunal contention which could dance most obscenely and use the strongest expressions while advocating their own cause." Others of the same tribe appear to have visited Lahore in 1870. Their Central Asiatic home is said to be Khorasan, and it seems that their journey from one country to the other and back extends over many years. A partial vocabulary of the dialect of thieves' Latin used by the Mayadds has, we believe, been compiled by Dr. Leitner.—Civil and Military Gazette.

John Duff, Chief of the Leading States- men of Zululand.

The Pall Mall Gazette thus describes the operations of the South African boss: John Dunn, one of the thirteen kinglets among whom, by the agency of Sir Garnet Wolseley, Zululand was divided, differs from his twelve brethren not only in being a pure-blooded European while they are stark savages, but also in reserving to himself in an especial way privileges of cutting timber, with the right to mine and seek for minerals, divert streams, cultivate unplowed lands, advance or retard trade, in such and so complete a way that he has, as it were, the right of ingress, egress and regress everywhere that his authority extends.
His country, next to the Tugela, and bordered to a great extent by the sea, has within it one landing-place, Port Durnford, where, it may be remembered, a noteworthy failure to secure a safe de-barcation delayed the operations of Sir Garnet Wolseley in the winter of 1879.
Dunn has imposed, after the Natal fashion, a hut tax on his people, amounting to five shillings per hut, payable in cash, every penny of which he keeps himself for his own purposes. Dunn is a Kaffir chief with European skill to raise a revenue for himself. He taxes all wagons going into his country to the amount of £25, and he has the right and the power to lay an embargo on all trade at will. He is a clever, observant, brave man, who means to make money fairly and rule reasonably if he can; but he takes thought to himself because he is "wise in his generation," and has no guarantee for the permanency of his office, one created by whim and of most uncertain tenure.
